

"IF YOU GIVE THE SAME CASE TO 50 DIFFERENT LAWYERS, you'll get 50 different results. Knowing this, and really believing it, we consistently strive to be the firm that delivers results on the uppermost end of that spectrum," says managing partner Darin Colucci with genuine pride about the firm that he and his partners have created. "We love nothing more than when a case comes to us that two or three or seven law firms have passed on because they collectively feel that it is 'unwinnable.' We've made a career out of taking these cases, crafting a unique and credible theory, and then aggressively pursuing the matter to a successful conclusion." And "successful" is exactly what this juggernaut of a law firm has been. From its business litigation department to its family law department to the elder law division, Colucci, Colucci, Marcus & Flavin continues to provide its clientele with the highest degree of proficiency in all of their undertakings. Such has been the case for the past 14 years.

"My brother, Dino, started the firm many years ago, with a handful of cases and less than a handful of capital. Since then we've grown our business by making one client happy at a time," says Colucci. But he's quick to point out "things really took off when my friend Matt Marcus joined us." Marcus is again recognized by his peers in Massachusetts Super Lawyers® in the area of elder law. Despite this personal honor, Marcus is quick to deflect the attention back toward his partners. "Dino and Darin have created such an amazing working atmosphere that I honestly couldn't imagine practicing anywhere else," he says. "I've seen firsthand how they take a difficult case and just see things that no one else can see. I've actually had the pleasure of listening to them discuss a new case, come up with the most unique and insightful theory, and then prevail in the end. And despite being at the top of their game, they never lose the human touch that goes so far with the clients and our staff."

With the addition of yet another friend, Paul Flavin, in 2005, the firm spread its legal wings even further to include the areas of construction litigation and family law. "Now we feel that we are truly a full-service law firm," says Colucci. "With the rarest of exceptions, we have someone here who can provide first-rate legal service no matter what's at stake." As a near constant in the "Noteworthy Verdicts and Settlements" section of various legal publications, Colucci, Colucci, Marcus & Flavin has solidified its place among the elite firms in New England.
