*CHOSEN TO 2008 SUPER LAWYERS

Last year saw an uninterrupted string of victories, including a multimillion-dollar settlement against a police department for causing injury to an innocent bystander during a “negligent high-speed chase.”

IN 2007, COLUCCI, COLUCCI, MARCUS & FLAVIN, P.C., enjoyed its most successful year in the firm’s long history. Known widely for never shying away from tough or cutting-edge cases, the firm has rightly earned its reputation for consistently producing remarkable results for its clients. “Lawyers and law firms will often stay mired in yesterday’s way of doing things by failing to adapt to the rapidly changing world around us,” says managing partner Darin Colucci. “We try to do just the opposite. Whether it’s accepting a business case on contingency or taking a case with an eye toward changing the law itself, we’re willing to ante up if we believe in the case.” And this isn’t mere rhetoric. Last year saw an uninterrupted string of victories, including a multimillion-dollar settlement against a police department for causing injury to an innocent bystander during a “negligent high-speed chase.” Before the firm accepted the case, private citizens were unable to maintain such an action. Dino and Darin Colucci took the case anyway with the full expectation that, in the end, they would deliver justice to their innocent client. “We just thought that the former law was wrong, plain and simple,” says Darin Colucci. “Before coming to us, our client’s case had previously been declined by numerous prominent law firms because, I imagine, they thought it was hopeless. We went into the matter with our eyes open, knowing that the odds were against us, but willing to bet on ourselves nonetheless. In the final analysis, we knew it was a fight worth fighting.”

Approaching every case with the confidence that comes only from dogged preparation and a relentless drive to excel, the firm’s success has expanded to areas well outside the personal injury field. Whether in estate planning, probate litigation, construction litigation or a complex personal injury case, this group of bright, energetic lawyers has managed to seamlessly blend a high degree of professionalism with gutsy determination. This uncommon work ethic consistently results in exceeding all client expectations.

With attorney Matt Marcus again recognized by his peers in Super Lawyers® in the area of estate planning and Paul Flavin anchoring the burgeoning construction and business litigation practice, the firm is flourishing and fully equipped to handle virtually every legal need.
